

SCOGGINS VALLEY PARK & TUALATIN RIVER ACCESS PROJECTS

PROJECT OVERVIEW

Washington County is developing two public recreational facilities within the county.

- A campground at Scoggins Valley Park
- A Tualatin River access facility at Eagle Landing Park

Washington County Parks manages the popular Scoggins Valley Park with Hagg Lake at its center. Since the reservoir was built in the early 1970s there has been demand for a public campground, and now we'll retrofit a 32-acre area as a campground.

Eagle Landing Park is an important link within the network of public access points for the Tualatin River Water Trail. Due to prior storm damage, the existing river access infrastructure was removed. This project will build a new facility to re-establish recreational access to the river.

JOIN US!

We would like to know your values, preferences for these two facilities, and what barriers might prevent you from using them.

Give us your feedback at these upcoming public events at Scoggins Valley Park:

- July 18: From 6-8 p.m. at the C-Ramp Pavilion. We'll be giving away three Annual Parking Passes!
- August 3: From 4-7 p.m. at Scoggins Valley Park at the C-Ramp. Come talk to project staff before the Rockfit Radio Summer Concert begins at 7 p.m.!

FOR MORE INFORMATION

Visit our website: www.washcoparks.org

Questions? washcoparks.org/contact-us